

The Apple iCloud Activation Lock is a feature that allows users to lock down an iPhone (or iPad). It requires the entry of an Apple ID before the device can be used again. It's part of the excellent "Find My iPhone" service and is extremely useful for many reasons. But it can also be a real pain if you or someone else obtains an iPhone that has another Apple ID attached to it. That iPhone is then 'locked' with an activation request, which can only be unlocked by the previous account that was registered on it. Only once the activation lock is removed, the device can be used with another Apple ID.

How to Remove & Bypass iCloud Lock? Many users are searching for a working way to bypass & remove iCloud Account Activation Lock on iPhone 14,13,12,11,10 or 6, 6 Plus, 5S, 5C, 5, 4S and iPad iOS 16.6, 16, 15, 14 or any other. The good news is that a new software is now available from iCloud Remover. Since the iPhone is a very popular device, the iCloud Activation Lock is a common problem that most users have. It can happen to anyone due to many different reasons. For example, there are many users who may have this problem (with the activation lock feature) simply because they bought a used iPhone device either online or from a second hand retailer. Normally the seller is required to provide the Apple ID and password along with the device, but unfortunately in many situations this is not the case. If you ever decide to buy a used iPhone don't forget to ask for the Apple login credentials.

iRemover is a company that allows users to turn off/disable and bypass the iCloud activation lock. This new software works not only on all iPhone models but also on iPads as well.

You should turn OFF all of the services that are shown here, as you may not want to sync other data, and then toggle ON the "Find My iPhone" service. You will then be shown a prompt indicating that this will disable "Find My iPhone" for the primary account, as this feature can only be used with a single iCloud account at a time.

The new software will disable and remove iCloud Lock for anyone who has a device linked to it. Regardless of whether it is due to the fact that you are locked out of your own unit (and are in a place like Saudi Arabia, which has no Apple Store to present invoice), or that you bought a used unit from a seller who did not remove their iCloud login details from it (intentionally or unintentionally).
